State employees to Governor Hogan: Maryland should be open for all our families - not just business

Baltimore - Maryland state and university employees rallied across the state tonight to push the Hogan administration for a fair contract as negotiations continue.

“Governor Larry Hogan put new signs on all the highways leading into our state that say, ‘Maryland – Open for Business’. State workers are here to say, “Maryland should be open for families too!

State and university employees are fighting for fairness on the job and for the resources we need to provide great services for Maryland families,” said Patrick Moran, President, AFSCME Maryland Council 3.

Tonight, union members held rallies in Baltimore, Cumberland, Hagerstown, Hyattsville and Salisbury.
